State briefs

Residents being allowed back into West Liberty

LOUISVILLE (AP) — Residents whose homes and belongings were destroyed by a massive tornado that smashed West Liberty last week were being allowed into town Tuesday, but officials say the area remains hazardous.
The EF-3 twister cut a 60-mile path through the region, killing six people in Morgan County and four more in neighboring Johnson and Lawrence counties. The tornado continued another 35 miles into West Virginia.
Vehicles coming into West Liberty on Tuesday will have to pass through a checkpoint, Kentucky Department of Emergency Management spokesman Buddy Rogers said.
“We don’t want them to overwhelm the community with too much traffic,” Rogers said. He said residents entering town should carpool and avoid unstable debris and damaged buildings.
West Liberty was one of the towns hardest hit by Friday’s tornadoes that killed 22 people in Kentucky. Three more tornadoes cut through the eastern part of the state, and a handful of smaller twisters struck in northern Kentucky on Friday, the weather service said.
Word came Tuesday night that President Barack Obama declared a disaster area in Kentucky, releasing federal funding for people in seven affected counties — Johnson, Kenton, Laurel, Lawrence, Menifee, Morgan and Pendleton. The White House and Gov. Steve Beshear said damage surveys are continuing, and more counties may be designated.

Beshear, Abramson head to damaged area

FRANKFORT (AP) — Gov. Steve Beshear and other state officials will be traveling again Wednesday to visit locations in eastern Kentucky damaged in last week’s deadly tornadoes and severe storms.
Beshear will go to Menifee, Morgan and Laurel counties. Lt. Gov. Jerry Abramson will head to Lawrence and Johnson counties. They were in West Liberty, Salyersville, Piner and East Bernstadt on Saturday.
Beshear’s office said damage assessment teams are visiting sites in several of the affected counties. The teams include representatives from the Federal Emergency Management Agency as well as state and local emergency management officials.
Several lawmakers will also make the trip Wednesday as well as representatives of the Division of Emergency Management and the Kentucky National Guard.

Schools face tough calls with tornado outbreak

HENRYVILLE, Ind. (AP) — The tornado came at the worst possible time for the hundreds of students loaded on school buses, ready to head home in Henryville, Ind.
There was no time to follow the preferred safety plan and herd students off the bus and inside the school. Instead, an assistant principal signaled drivers to go, setting off a desperate race to beat the tornado that was just minutes from slamming into the town and destroying a large part of the school.

Unlike snowstorms or hurricanes, which come with plenty of advance warning, tornadoes pose unique challenges for school districts because they can pop up suddenly, leaving little time to scramble to safety. School officials say the choice usually boils down to dismissing class well in advance or sheltering students in the school until the bad weather passes. Neither is guaranteed to save lives.
“When you look at the fact that the average amount of time from a tornado warning being issued to a tornado touching down is five to seven minutes, you can’t get them to a safe place in that amount of time,” said Bob Roberts, emergency management coordinator for Tulsa Public Schools in Oklahoma.
In Henryville, what seemed like bad timing turned out to be fortunate. Despite harrowing encounters that forced one driver and students to duck into a crawl space and another to seek cover with children on the floor of a car, all the students survived back-to-back tornadoes that devastated the town about 20 miles north of Louisville.
“The very hallways we would have had those kids in, the ceiling collapsed. Those kids would have been crushed,” said John Reed, assistant superintendent of West Clark Community Schools.

Statewide efforts under way to help victims

LEXINGTON (AP) — Efforts are under way all over Kentucky to help communities hit last week by devastating tornadoes.
There are drop off sites all over central Kentucky for people who want to donate items, according to the Lexington Herald-Leader.
Agencies collecting items include the Christian Appalachian Project, which has a 53-foot trailer in the Walmart parking lot in Lexington’s Hamburg area.
The American Red Cross and the Salvation Army are also accepting donations and state police posts all over the state are taking non-perishable food items and cleaning supplies.
Meanwhile, several entities are joining forces to hold a “Kentucky Cares” tornado relief phonebank Friday on WKYT-TV in Lexington.
The Rev. Tim Cooper pulled his loaded-down SUV up beside the CAP trailer on Monday afternoon.

to combat the growing drug abuse problem, especially among young people.

Varga knows first-hand the devastating affects drugs can have on a family.

He grew up in Detroit in a single parent home where he watched his mother regularly abuse alcohol and drugs. The only escape he found from his troubled homelife was basketball, which he used to earn a scholarship to the University of Pittsburgh.

At Pittsburg he excelled, becoming a team captain and earning All Big East Team honors. After graduation, he was invited to play for the NBA's Dallas Mavericks, but an injury prior to training camp ended that dream. Varga eventually signed to play professionally in Spain, where he was selected to play in the league's All Star game both years he played in the league.

But in 1999, at the age of 25 and at the peak of his professional career, Varga said he began to feel there was a different purpose for his life than just shooting jump shots and dunking a basketball.

With a multi-million dollar contract on the table waiting to be signed, Varga made the decision to give up what he had worked toward for his whole life so he could do something that would make a difference in the lives of other people.

In 2000, he founded InspireNow Inc. out of a desire to invest his life in helping youth around the country through character education.

InspireNow's core belief is that character development, a commitment to excellence and personal responsibility are the building blocks for children to achieve their fullest potential.

Varga works with educators and students nationwide to create safer and more positive learning environments through quality school assemblies and character programs.

Clark Christian Drug Coalition president Steve Humble, who also pastors the Winchester Covenant Church, said he came away impressed with Varga's work after the two were introduced by a friend last year while Varga was speaking at an event in Breathitt County.

After speaking to students at the high school in Breathitt County, Varga invited the students to come to another meeting the following Wednesday night, and more than 2,500 showed up. Humble said that's when he thought the drug coalition needed to bring Varga to Clark County.

"Those kids poured out their stories on his Facebook page, just amazing stuff. Obviously what he said went right to their heart. So the CDC board talked about it with some local pastors, and we just thought it was imperative to try to have him here," Humble said. "The neat thing is that, yes he's educating them, but this is a generation where a lot of them don't have any reason to hope or have a sense of purpose. So, he also stimulates a hope in the fact that they can make choices that will make a difference in their lives, and for a lot of kids, that's a big thing."

Varga will make his first appearance in Winchester on March 25 at Central Baptist Church, then return April 22 to speak at Church of the Living God and May 6 at Calvary Christian Church. He will speak March 27 to students at George Rogers Clark High School and March 29 to students at Conkwright and Clark Middle schools.

When speaking at the schools, Varga's messages are centered on character development and personal responsibility, Humble said, but at the Wednesday night meetings at local churches, Varga gets an opportunity to share his spiritual journey.

"What Chad does in the schools is very important, but on Wednesdays, the kids get an opportunity to get the power of God involved in it," Humble said. "As a Christian and a pastor, I believe, obviously, that their real hope and real change comes from getting right and connected with the creator and finding his purpose in their lives."

Statistics show Clark County's drug problem is getting worse each year and devastating the lives of families throughout the community. Last year, there were 20 overdose deaths in the county and more than 20 other overdose cases where individuals were treated at the hospital and survived.

Humble said the drug coalition feels it is imperative to reach out to young people and get them some support before it's too late.

"My heart is to see young people have a chance to have a real life and get some healing from some of the background they have and come to hope," Humble said. "We don't want to take the place of their parents, we want to reach their parents, too, but so many kids are coming up on their own without any guidance. We've got to get to kids where they are and help them find a sense of purpose not to destroy their lives before they get a chance to live them."

Humble said the CCDC will be having training sessions in coming weeks for church and community members to provide follow-up with the students who come to Varga's meetings.

Going out and following up with the students afterward is vital, Humble said.

"The key issue is the follow-up. They have an emotional response, it's powerful and can be an important moment in their lives, but if we don't follow-up and build relationships with them, it won't work," Humble said. "Jesus didn't do most of his ministry in a synagogue or church, he was out among the people. We've got to change our mentality and meet them where they are and try to build relationships, and if those are good, those kids will probably end up in church. But we have to reach out and meet them where they are to make a difference. If we don't reach these kids, we are in serious trouble."

The Project Graduation committee has approximately $3,800 but an additional $11,000 still is needed to stage the event on the same scale as in years past.

"We wanted to start early this year to try to plan more for them to do. ... But we can't really do the planning unless we know how much we're going to have," said Gordon Parido, father of senior Kelsie Parido and former GRC principal.

Parents are asked to take a more active role in the planning of the event this year, even if their children are underclassmen.

The more parent involvement, the better, Parido and Wills said, and parents of underclassmen can use what they learn to help organize next year's event.

"There's just so, so much that needs to be done," Parido said. "For so many years, (senior advisors) Nancy (Wills) and Ruthanne (Sharrock) did the bulk of it."

Parental involvement only helps the students, Parido said, and the more donations volunteers can procure, the more activities and prizes students will be offered. In years past, students have received scholarship money, gas gift cards, Walmart gift cards, dorm furniture like mini-refrigerators, and iPads and iPods.

"I think the closer we get, people start seeing we need to get things done," Parido said. "If you can get out and work, that really benefits the students, because all the money goes directly to the students."

An official graduation date will be set after spring break, April 2-6. Door prizes will not be purchased until the week before graduation, when organizers have a better idea of how many students to prepare for and how much funding they will have.

Wills said local businesses have been generous in the past with donations, including food, gift certificates, prizes and games. Project Graduation usually includes a disc jockey, a mechanical bull, a Velcro wall, Guitar Hero, movies, cornhole, basketball, ping pong and casino games.

"Our community has always been really good about helping us out," Wills said.

Monetary donations, he said, are "really important," too, and people can go to <http://kyem.ky.gov/donationsvolunteers>, to donate cash to the disaster victims.

Winchester Fire-EMS Chief Eric Hunter gave a presentation of photos taken Saturday in Morgan County by department personnel who went to help. Today, personnel will return to help with debris removal.

"We did go into West Liberty on our way through, both in the standpoint of offering our services but also from the standpoint of education for our guys; they've never seen this," Hunter said.

Burtner said the Winchester Police Department loaned the West Liberty Police Department two cruisers that were not specifically assigned to local officers, because eight of West Liberty's cruisers were totaled.

Commissioners voted to approve that action Tuesday night.

Twenty-seven Kentucky counties have declared states of emergency, 48 counties have reported damage and three cities have independently declared states of emergency, Epperson said. Also, 375 members of the National Guard are currently mobilized to assist counties, he said.

That jerk in the other car

CHICAGO — My husband has started teaching our oldest son the rules of the road in anticipation of his getting behind the wheel. A few weeks ago, I heard my husband tell the impressionable young boy that people in expensive cars have the tendency to drive more aggressively than those in economical rides. I hemmed at such a sweeping generalization, but now there's some scientific proof from psychologists at the University of California, Berkeley, and the University of Toronto.

At a four-way-stop intersection in the San Francisco Bay Area, the researchers found that, relative to the lower class, drivers of higher-end automobiles were four times more likely to cut off other vehicles before waiting their turn at a busy intersection with stop signs in all directions, and significantly likelier to drive through a crosswalk without yielding to a waiting pedestrian.

Of course, that's not to say that drivers of 1999 Ford Tauruses never have their rude or hurried moments, but the evidence against the wealthy is pretty damning. In fact, in half a year of hearing about the so-called evil "1 percent," this is the most specific and tangible evidence of their potential nastiness I've seen.

The researchers, in a report published in the journal Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, concluded that because rich people are so much less dependent on social bonds for survival than are the poor, their self-interest leads them to have fewer reservations about breaking rules. For instance, the researchers found that subjects self-reporting high socioeconomic status were more likely to exhibit unethical decision-making tendencies, take valued goods from others, lie in a negotiation, cheat to increase their chances of winning a prize and endorse unethical behavior at work.

That might explain why the FBI recently announced that it recruited Michael Douglas, who famously portrayed Gordon "Greed is good" Gekko in the iconic 1987 film "Wall Street," to warn about the perils of the highfalutin crime of insider trading. "Our economy is increasingly dependent on the success and integrity of the financial markets," Douglas says, suggesting how to get more information for avoiding securities fraud. "The movie was fiction, but the problem is real."

I know all this sounds unreal. But it's not. The scientists had participants rank themselves, relative to others in society, on a 10-rung ladder in terms of wealth, education and the prestige of their jobs and literally found out who takes candy from babies.

When test subjects of any status were asked to imagine themselves at a high social rank, they helped themselves to more candies from a jar they were told was meant to be donated to children in a nearby location but that they were welcome to take from.

Did you catch the nuance of that last example? It doesn't take multi-million-dollar windfalls to make people into greedy, self-interested jerks. Merely imagining ourselves rich and powerful triggers the bad behavior.

The reverse was also true: The researchers also found that watching a movie about childhood poverty had the effect of encouraging people of all classes to want to help others in need.

So, rich or poor, it's all a state of mind. At least we can be thankful that those of us in the 99 percent outnumber the 1 percent on the road. Lucky us.

Letter to Mitt: You can still win, yes you can

WASHINGTON — Dear Mitt: Consider me a neighbor leaning over the picket fence. You have a picket fence, don't you? An ivy-covered wall? Fine, I'll get a ladder.

This is what I want to say: Pay no attention to that man in the bow tie. Just because George Will says something doesn't make it so. Just because he has written you off as unable to defeat President Obama, don't believe it. This isn't over.

Kathleen Parker

Also, not in any way to compare these two: Do not fear Rush Limbaugh. When he utters something repugnant, say so. When he calls a young woman a "slut" on the public airwaves, do not say you would not have chosen those words. Be offended! Be outraged! Do you need Limbaugh's base to win? Are those really your people? You had an opportunity to establish yourself as a leader and missed it. Though not irreparable, this is a shame and is symptomatic of what ails your campaign. Too eager not to offend, you are reluctant to say what is true.

You have my sympathies. At this point in the campaign, your autopilot has been recharged to within an inch of its life. You've said the same things so many times, you're not sure you believe them anymore. You don't remember what it's like to kick back and enjoy a quiet cup of cocoa by the fire. You're winning, but it feels like you're losing. (Thanks, George.)

This is when friends are supposed to intervene and remind you of who you are. The problem is, a candidate doesn't have friends. He has advisers, consultants, contributors and All Those People out there — Everyday Americans with their cellphones pointing, snapping and clicking. You need them to love you, but it's not your nature to ingratiate yourself. The whole process is exhausting and humiliating and — can we be frank? — monumentally stupid at times. Most of the time.

If you're lucky, you have a good dog. Never mind. You do have a family and a fabulous wife, but she can only do so much. At the end of one endless day after another, you're alone with your sound bites, the fleeting thrill of a win coupled with the ever-dawning possibility of crushing defeat. While others foam and fiddle on the periphery, this is the existential bubble in which you dwell. Some of us just like to call it hell.

In the spirit of neighborliness, herewith a few thoughts to consider as the wolf sniffs at the sliver of light beneath your door:

First, your wall is too high. You have constructed a barrier around you, perhaps to protect yourself from the cruelties of a world that remains skeptical of what's at the core of your being, and that's your religion. Or maybe it is a function of always trying to get everything just right. Sometimes too careful, you've also made yourself remote and concealed your best stuff. People feel that distance no matter how rolled-up your sleeves are or how many pancakes you flip. Relax. Stop trying so hard. Find the strength and humility you express so beautifully after losses, and bring it on now.

By the way, I'm sorry I called you a "dork" on "Meet the Press." I was thinking about how uncool you are and how much I like that in a president. It's an outdated word that meant out-of-step back in our day. Kind of dorky, actually. I followed that remark with an analogy: You're like the doctor who doesn't have a good bedside manner. Who cares? His cure is what we want.

No one in this country thinks you're a cool, with-it kind of guy — and they're fine with that. They don't want you to be cool. They want you to fix the economy. They want you to be serious, presidential and the grown-up you are.

There's no predicting what will happen in November, no matter what the pundits say. But if you go down, enjoy the ride by being fearlessly yourself — uncool, unafraid, intelligent, experienced, determined and, as you put it, resolute.

Be as liberated in seeking victory as you would be in defeat. This includes being outraged at the outrageous, willing to tell unpleasant truths, temperate in matters grave (steering you away from statements such as Iran will have nukes if Obama wins), and being willing to lose.

True Mitt can win, by George.

SENATE WEEK IN REVIEW

Progress made on some bills regarding safety of Kentuckians

FRANKFORT — We have many and various goals when we convene in Frankfort for any legislative session, but while specific bills change from year to year, our over-arching impulse remains the same: To make Kentucky a better, safer place to live, especially by providing needed protection to our most vulnerable citizens.

State Sen. R.J. Palmer

This week, much of our work targeted that continuing effort.

We took a step toward eliminating the problem of meth production and abuse in the state by approving Senate Bill 3.

The bill would decrease the current monthly over-the-counter purchase limit of pseudoephedrine, a required precursor to "cooking" methamphetamine, or "meth," from 9 grams to 7.2 grams, and enforce a 24-gram-per-year limit. Pseudoephedrine products are the only ingredient in meth that cannot be substituted. These limits, sponsors say, will still provide any law-abiding Kentucky family a more-than-adequate supply of over-the-counter cold and allergy medicine, without having to see a doctor. Amounts in excess of these limits could be obtained by a doctor's prescription.

Under the measure, the real time tracking system for purchase of pseudoephedrine products — Sudafed, Claritin D, Mucinex D and the like — would remain in effect. This will continue to permit law enforcement agencies to monitor and trace purchases that have been made for illicit purposes, such as "smurfing," in which meth dealers hire a group of people to visit multiple pharmacies to collectively acquire large amounts of decongestants beyond individual-purchase limits.

In an effort to keep people safe on our roads, we passed Senate Bill 89 by a 31-5 vote. This bill would expand the current law that only requires seat-belt use in vehicles designed to carry 10 or fewer passengers to now include up to 15-passenger vehicles. Vehicles seating more than 15 people are federally classified as buses, and are not affected by state regulation.

The measure comes as the result of a deadly 2010 crash on I-65 near Munfordville involving a semi-truck and a 15-passenger church van. Most of the van's occupants were unrestrained and 11 people died. Supporters of the legislation say the accident's human carnage could have been alleviated if seat belts had been used.

Another transportation-related bill gained unanimous support in the Senate this week. Senate Bill 124 would remove the requirement that learner's driving permit holders be physically accompanied by a passenger who is at least 21 years old — but only when they are being supervised by a driver's training instructor on a closed driving range. Supporters say the provision will allow schools to offer training programs for students to safely practice on a closed multi-vehicle course without the burden of added staffing requirements.

Senate Bill 115 also received unanimous support this week. The bill would require a medical examination, including a medical history, physical examination and diagnosis of patients prior to their admission to a personal-care facility. It was proposed in memory of Joseph Lawrence "Larry" Lee, Jr. who passed away last year after escaping from a personal-care facility. Advocates for the measure say Lee's mental condition made him unsuitable for residence in a personal-care home and that a medical examination could have prevented his placement and death.

Other legislation approved this week includes Senate Bill 165 (by a 33-4 vote), which would require that State Fair Board members appointed by the governor also be confirmed by the Senate and restricts fair board members from being reappointed more than once.

Another measure, Senate Bill 152, expands "call before you dig" requirements to include some timber harvesting activities and creates three types of requests, each allowing a separate response time, to locate underground utilities. It also requires any newly-installed underground facilities be locatable from the surface. All of these bills now go to the House for its consideration.

We will consider many more bills in an effort to positively impact the commonwealth in the final third of this year's legislative session. I am most interested in hearing your thoughts and concerns about the legislation impacting you personally. If you are not already, I encourage you to get involved in the law-making process.

Severe weather: Are you prepared?

There have been many times of devastating weather in the past, and I always thought how terrible it was. It came home last week for a lot of us. And although I've written my news articles on this topic several times, it's worth repeating again to get the message across; Severe weather can strike with very little warning. With some pre-planning you can help protect yourself, your family and others.

Jennifer Howard

- During thunderstorms and other severe weather warnings, seek shelter inside a home or large building.
- Avoid using the telephone except for emergencies.
- Don't stand underneath a tall, isolated tree in an open area, this acts as natural lightning rod.
- Get out of and away from open water.
- Get away from tractors and other metal equipment.
- Families need to establish a storm-ready kit for each member of the family. These items can be easily stored in a bucket, backpack or small suitcase. You will want to store the kit in the room you've designated as a "safe-room," whether it be in the basement

Bob Flynn/bflynn@winchestersun.com

- A funnel cloud spawned from a powerful storm system that passed through Kentucky Friday is shown in Madison County. The storm killed more than 20 people in the state and prompted Gov. Steve Beshear to seek a federal disaster declaration.
- or a center room of the home. Items to include in your storm-ready kit include a flashlight with extra batteries, first aid kit, canned food and water (the individual serving sizes work great for those with different tastes), weather radio, paper towels, soap, pain reliever, prescription drugs, next of kin emergency contact numbers, gloves, trash bags and water. Remember to refresh your kit as we change our clocks each year.
- For some of our friends and families, this kit has sustained them the last couple of days until assistance could get there. For more information on emergency preparedness, contact the Clark County Extension Service at 744-4682 or visit the website at <http://ces.ca.uky.edu/clark>.
- On a lighter note, don't forget the Winchester Weigh Down is just seven days away! Register at one of our six weigh-in locations: Clark County Extension, Clark County Health Department, College Park Gym, Ertel Medicine and Pediatrics, Winchester YMCA and Winchester Family Practice. You can find a list of classes, registration information and more on our web site at www.winchester-weighdown.com.

Bremer Ehrler, Democratic candidate for the Democratic nomination for Secretary of State in the May primary, campaigned in Winchester Friday. Ehrler, who was appointed Jefferson County judge-executive in 1984 to complete the remaining year of U.S. Senator Mitch McConnell's term, visited local officials and businesses. Prior to becoming Jefferson County Judge-Executive, Ehrler served 11 years as Jefferson County Clerk.

The Ladies Fellowship Circle of Forest Grove Christian Church met Monday evening at the church with Donna Sebastian, president, conducting the meeting. The devotional was given by Amelia Adams. The secretary's report was given by Donna Adams.

"Using Your Microwave Oven" was the topic of the March meeting of the First Nighters Homemakers Club held at the home of Betty Jean Aldridge, Hampton Avenue. Judy Christian gave the lesson and stated microwave cooking can be exciting and challenging.

In this Feb. 9, 2012, image made from video, Alabama tornado victim Deloris Mack, left, talks with disaster relief volunteer Julie Davis of Girard, Pa., at a work project in Tuscaloosa, Ala. Davis and her husband Ken are "disaster junkies," an informal term for volunteers who make repeated trips across the United States to provide assistance after disasters.

Some volunteers addicted to disaster relief

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Taking a break from laying sod in a tornado-torn neighborhood, volunteer David Elliott cocked his head to the left. He was trying to remember all the trips he's made to help rebuild after disasters. Elliott went to New Orleans seven times after Hurricane Katrina swamped the city in 2005, or was it eight? He was in Nashville, Tenn., after floodwaters inundated the city in 2010. He's been to Alabama three times since tornadoes killed about 250 people statewide in April. Wait: that was just last year? "I've lost track," said Elliott, of Sacramento, Calif. Rebuilding after storms is becoming a growth industry as the United States is slammed by more natural disasters, and leaders of the response efforts say the nation's recovery network functions as well as it does because of a backbone of volunteers nicknamed "disaster junkies." The small group of people like Elliott travel from tragedy to tragedy shoveling mud out of flooded houses and rebuilding neighborhoods laid waste by busted levees, tornadoes and wildfires. Often, they bring more helpers with them. On Friday severe storms slammed parts of the South and Midwest creating even more work opportunities for volunteers. No one knows exactly how many disaster junkies are active in the United States, but the National Voluntary Organizations Active in Disaster says a core group of around 300 people travel the country at least six months out of each year performing such work. Based in Arlington, Va., the nonprofit group estimates several thousand more people are like Elliott and make several trips each year helping out after disasters. Often associated with churches or other religious groups and traveling at their own expense, these volunteers sleep in churches or mobile homes and frequently eat food provided by other volunteers. While volunteers and others provided labor worth some $147 million and donated another $200 million toward relief aid in 2008, the last year for which figures are available, some recovery projects still can't get off the ground because of the sheer number of disasters that struck the country in recent months, said James McGowan, associate executive director with National Voluntary Organizations Active in Disaster. "After all these disasters across the country our resources have really been stretched," said McGowan, whose organization includes 51 nonprofits. "We've been struggling with it." Thousands of people volunteer regularly without approaching "junkie" status. The American Red Cross, which is part of McGowan's organization, said 24,236 of its volunteers helped out after 137 disasters in 46 states last year, but most went to only one or two sites. Dan Burton, a Samaritan's Purse project manager who has worked on disaster recoveries from Atlanta to Alaska, said the "junkies" provide a knowledge base and experience level that many less-experienced volunteers lack. Major disaster assistance work would be much more difficult without them, he said. "There's an array of jobs to do, and they're just willing to do whatever it is that we have to do," said Burton, overseeing the rebuilding of a home that was destroyed by a tornado in Alabama last year.

Farmers warned to watch for tent caterpillars

University of Kentucky experts report that eastern tent caterpillar eggs have begun hatching well ahead of last year and expect the egg hatch to be completed in Central Kentucky by the first full week of March.

According to Lee Townsend, UK College of Agriculture entomologist, populations have been sporadic during the last few years, with pockets of increased populations in some areas.

He estimated that Central Kentucky is seven to 10 days away from being able to see distinct tents in trees with live larvae.

Townsend urged horse farms to check wild cherry and related trees for eastern tent caterpillar activity to determine whether management is necessary. If control measures are needed to reduce numbers, steps should be taken before the caterpillars leave their trees.

“The small caterpillars will stay near the egg mass for a short time before moving to feed on expanding leaves,” Townsend said.

“Eastern tent caterpillars grow and develop as long as the temperature is above 37 degrees; the warmer it is, the faster they will grow.

Cold temperatures will slow them down, but the tent and the general cold hardness of the species will keep them from being affected drastically, even if temperatures drop below freezing at night,” he added.

Controlling eastern tent caterpillars is vital to area horse farms, as UK research has proven the caterpillars caused outbreaks of Mare Reproductive Loss Syndrome, which can cause late-term foal losses, early- and late-term fetal losses and weak foals.

During the 2001-2002 MRLS outbreak, an estimated 30 percent of that year’s Thoroughbred foal crop was lost. The state suffered an economic loss of approximately $336 million in all breeds of horses.

UK researchers conducted epidemiological and field studies, which demonstrated that MRLS was associated with unprecedented populations of eastern tent caterpillars on Kentucky horse farms.

Studies since the 2001-2002 outbreak subsequently have revealed that horses will inadvertently eat the caterpillars, and the caterpillar hairs embed into the lining of the alimentary tract.

Once that protective barrier is breached, normal alimentary tract bacteria may gain access to and reproduce in sites with reduced immunity, such as the fetus and placenta. Fetal death from these alimentary tract bacteria is the hallmark of MRLS.

UK entomologists recommend that unless horse farm managers have been aggressive in managing eastern tent caterpillars, or removing host trees, they should keep pregnant mares out of pastures bordered by cherry trees for the next several weeks.

Townsend offered the following recommendations for controlling moderate to large caterpillar populations if horses cannot be moved to avoid possible exposure.

“Foliar sprays for caterpillar control can be made when tents are about the size of a baseball. Another option is the injection of trees with a systemic insecticide by commercial pesticide applicators or arborists. Regardless of the treatment used, it is important to revisit the sites in about five days to assess caterpillar activity,” he said.

For additional information about eastern tent caterpillars, or other problem insects, please call the Clark County cooperative Extension Service at 744-4682

UK College of Agriculture, through its land-grant mission, reaches across the commonwealth with teaching, research and extension to enhance the lives of Kentuckians.

Ag. commissioner keynote speaker at safety forum

Frankfort, Ky. — Agriculture Commissioner James Comer will be the keynote speaker for the 19th annual Louis Crosier Farm Safety Symposium on March 9 in Elizabethtown.

“Farming is an honorable and rewarding profession, but it can pose some serious safety concerns,” Comer said. “One moment of inattention can leave a farmer injured or worse, and that can create a hardship for the whole family. The farm safety symposium is an opportunity for farmers, emergency rescuers, health care workers and the public to learn about the latest advances in farm safety and farm rescue.”

The symposium will begin at 7 p.m. EST at Elizabethtown Community and Technical College. This year’s theme is “A New Day for Kentucky Agriculture Safety and Security.” Ronnie Day, executive director of the Kentucky Fire Commission, also will speak at the symposium, which is part of the three-day Dixie Fire School. The public is invited.

The event is co-sponsored by Hardin County and LaRue County Farm Bureau in partnership with the Dixie Firefighters Association. For more information, go to www.dixiefirefighters.com.

The Kentucky Department of Agriculture’s Farm and Home Safety Program travels to every county in Kentucky to deliver safety messages to schools, farm groups, civic organizations, and other groups that request a presentation.

The program operates a one-of-a-kind rollover tractor simulator, which demonstrates the correct use of a rollover protective structure on a tractor, and a miniature grain bin and wagon.

Warm winters mean more bugs

Hartford, Conn. (AP) — The mild winter that has given many Northern farmers a break from shoveling and a welcome chance to catch up on maintenance could lead to a tough spring as many pests that would normally freeze, have not.

Winters are usually what one agriculture specialist calls a “reset button” that gives farmer a fresh start come planting season.

But with relatively mild temperatures and little snow, insects are surviving, growing and, in some areas, already munching on budding plants.

Almost every state had a warmer-than-usual January, according to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

In Albany, N.Y., for example, the average high in January was 37 degrees, when it’s usually less than freezing, according to the National Weather Service.

The Upper Midwest, Great Plains and a few other areas were “much above normal” in temperature, NOAA said.

Dawn Allen, who has an 89-year-old, family-run bog in Freetown, Mass., said her family will start sweeping bogs with a contraption similar to a butterfly net in April to catch winter moth caterpillars, instead of waiting until mid-May, when they typically start. The winter moth caterpillars are aggressive and eat buds, potentially ruining a crop for a whole year.

Martha Sylvia, a research technician at the University of Massachusetts cranberry station, said growers should expect to start spraying earlier and more often because there’s “definitely an upswing” in winter moths.

Tim Tucker, a beekeeper in Niotaze, Kan., said he saw flies in February when “all flies should be gone” and bumble bees that usually don’t appear until May or June.

The warm weather hasn’t been entirely good for beekeeping, though. Usually, queen bees won’t lay eggs in the cold, but this year, his hives have been active.

“This year, we have some hives that raised bees all winter,” Tucker said. “I don’t think they ever stopped.”

Because so many bees are being raised, Tucker has had to buy supplemental food, such as sucrose, so they don’t eat all the honey he wants to sell.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Wednesday, March 7, 2012:

This year you often feel at odds with others, even those with whom you have experienced great closeness. The issue is boundaries; however, this issue will seem less important in another year because of your attention to it now. If you are single, you might be fortunate enough to attract someone who has similar issues and is willing to look at them with you. Otherwise, you are on a dating roller coaster. If you are attached, your willingness to look within will encourage the same from your mate. This year could be fundamental to your life together. VIRGO often challenges and criticizes you.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★★ You have a strong sense of direction, no matter which way you turn. Listen to your sixth sense with regard to money. Focus on the present, and maximize your financial security. Tonight: Clear out your desk or workspace.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★★ No one can deny your creativity when you decide to apply your focus and ingenuity to a situation. You can make the unworkable workable. Be sensitive to a situation where you suspect the other party might be out of sorts. You do not need an emotional collision. Tonight: Let your hair down.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★ Stay close to home, but be smart and don't push your luck. You could be overlv tired and dragging from recent pressures. Give yourself a break from whatever is creating this stress. Tonight: Happy at home.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★★ You might want to have a long-overdue conversation. Be careful, as one of you could be angrier than anticipated. If it is you, be sure to clear the air in a way that does not close down a conversation. Tonight: Make it easy.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★★ You could decide that you would prefer to stand back and assess a situation from a distance. You have a strong sense of humor and enjoy yourself no matter what. Those you answer to clearly are favorably disposed toward you. The timing is right to make an important request or talk to these people. Tonight: Treat time.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★★ Confusion surrounds a key person. If you overthink, you will not know which way to go. Be spontaneous, and you naturally will draw the results you want. Someone you care about lets you know that he or she would like to be around you. Tonight: The world is your oyster.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★ Pull back some, and understand what is happening behind the scenes. Your sense of humor goes a long way toward resolving a problem, in that you detach and become less involved. Be careful when expressing your dismay. You will come off far more strongly than you think. Tonight: Vanish quickly!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★★ Zero in on the basics during a meeting. You finally gain someone's confidence. and feel much better as a result. Be sensible when dealing with an angry or upset person. This person might not be able to contain him- or herself. Tonight: Where the fun is.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★ Stay on top of your responsibilities. Though much could be happening around you, be sure to keep your plans and schedule intact. You have enough energy to squeeze in an extra event with a friend. Worry less. Tonight: Know when to call it a day.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★★ Your ability to detach and see what others refuse to see earmarks your abilities, especially today. Creativity seems to flow naturally between you and others. A mere suggestion could trigger a great idea. Tonight: Where the fun is.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★ You might be dealing with one person after another. Everyone has something he or she needs your opinion on. Your nature is unusually giving, especially now. Still, do not toss your plans down the drain. Tonight: Dinner for two.

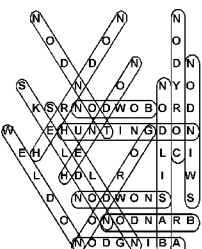

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★★ You need to sort through what you must do, as opposed to what you want to accomplish. Others need your input and could be quite demanding. Trust your judgments with a key person. Tonight: Hang out with a lively friend.

Davis sweeps SEC awards

By Larry Vaught
Advocate-Messenger

LEXINGTON — Anthony Davis was named the Southeastern Conference's player of the year Monday as well as the league's top freshman and best defensive player. Kentucky's John Calipari, who led No. 1 UK to a 16-0 conference record, was honored as the SEC Coach of the Year and senior Darius Miller won the Sixth Man of the Year award.

Davis owns the school and conference records for most blocks in a season with 146. He averages a team-high 14.4 points and 9.8 rebounds per game.

Davis and team-mate Michael Kidd-Gilchrist were named among 15 Finalists for the John R. Wooden Award announced Tuesday and Davis was also named Player of the Year by Sporting News. The U.S. Basketball Writers Association announced that Davis was voted the District IV Player of the Year. Davis, along with Kidd-Gilchrist, was also voted to the District IV All-District Team.

Kidd-Gilchrist joined Davis on the All-SEC first team, freshman team and defensive team. Kidd-Gilchrist averaged 11.9 points and 7.8 rebounds per game. Sophomores Terrence Jones and Doron Lamb were All-SEC second team selections. Jones averages 12.3 points and 6.8 rebounds as a sophomore. Lamb averages 13.3 points with a team-high .840 free-throw percentage.

10th Region Tournament: George Rogers Clark 61, Mason County 39

Twice as nice

Clark senior Bopper Stenzel cuts down the net after the Cardinals defeated Mason County 61-39 to win their third 10th Region title in six years. Clark will play Owensboro Apollo in the Sweet Sixteen at 8 p.m. a week from today at Rupp Arena in Lexington.

Cards beat Royals for 2nd consecutive regional title

MOUNT STERLING — George Rogers Clark is going back to Rupp Arena.

The Cardinals captured their second straight 10th Region championship with a 61-39 rout of Mason County Tuesday night at the MCHS Arena, giving Clark its third title in six years. The Cardinals advance to next week's boys Sweet Sixteen at Rupp Arena and will take on 3rd Region winner Apollo at 8 p.m. Wednesday night.

During the next 24 hours, Clark will celebrate the two-peat, an accomplishment that many didn't expect after the Cards lost most of their entire starting cast from last year's squad that fell to Louisville Eastern in the state quarterfinals.

"Miracles happen," Clark senior Charlie Rogers said. "We each took a piece of the puzzle and just played. I didn't feel good tonight, but I just played through it and took my piece of the puzzle."

Clark coach Scott Humphrey said his current flock of Cardinals were deserving of the feat.

"I know it's kind of cliché, but this bunch has worked for four years, knowing that they only had one shot (at winning the region)," the Clark coach said afterward. "Playing time just wasn't there in the past and I'm just thrilled to death for them."

One of those holdovers from last year's squad — starting point guard Bopper Stenzel — helped lead the Cards back to the promise land. Stenzel scored a game-high 24 points against the Royals and scored nine of

Western catches dance fever

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP) — Teeng Akol found himself on the bottom of Western Kentucky's midcourt dogpile inside Summit Arena.

The Hilltoppers' junior didn't mind in the least.

Akol scored 23 points and George Fant added 17 as Western Kentucky kept its dancing shoes on for a little while longer, earning a 74-70 win over North Texas on Tuesday night in the championship game of the Sun Belt conference tournament.

The win capped a stunning run for the Hilltoppers (15-18), who earned their first NCAA tournament berth since 2009 by winning four games in as many days. It also caps a roller-coaster season during which Western Kentucky survived a midseason coaching change and the development of several key freshmen.

"I'm so happy I can't even begin to describe how I'm feeling right now," Akol said.

The Hilltoppers' rocky season continued Tuesday night, with the Mean Green (18-14) leading by as many as 13 points in the second half.

Just as it had done throughout the Sun Belt tournament, Western Kentucky rallied. The Hilltoppers took the lead for good at 70-68 after a 3-pointer by Kahlil McDonald, who finished with 14 points. McDonald then hit the clinching free throws to send the Hilltoppers to the most unexpected of NCAA tournament berths.

"This season has been unbelievable," Fant said. "A coaching change ... Everyone was down on us before we got out here, saying we weren't old enough, mature enough, we couldn't guard some of the people we obviously guarded here."

"It speaks for itself." Western Kentucky began the season 5-11, resulting in the firing of former coach Ken McDonald on Jan. 5. The firing came one day after a chaotic loss in which Louisiana-Lafayette played the final possession of the overtime game with six players.

Ray Harper was named the Hilltoppers' interim coach, and they responded with a 3-6 start under their former assistant before closing the regular season with three wins in four games. Not even Harper could see a run coming like what Western Kentucky did in the Sun Belt tournament. The No. 7 seed won four games in four days, giving them six wins in a row and setting the stage for their unexpected return to the NAAs.

They did so by defeating No. 10 seed Florida International, second-seeded Arkansas-Little Rock and No. 3 Denver, along with the fifth-seeded Mean Green.

"I need a day off," Harper joked. "I'm just happy for these young men. We put in a lot of hard work. "I knew we had a chance. In this profession, that's all you ask. Give me an opportunity and we'll see what happens."

Tony Mitchell scored 18 points to lead North Texas (18-14), which was playing in its third straight league championship game and fourth in six years. Alzee Williams added 16 points, Brandon Walton had 14 and Jacob Holmen 11.

The Mean Green appeared in control midway through the second half, taking a 55-42 lead after a Tyler Hall jumper.

Fant scored the next seven points for the Hilltoppers to cut the deficit to six. Western Kentucky then tied the game at 59 on a basket by Akol, but it fell behind by five after Mitchell put North Texas up 66-61.

Western Kentucky, however, wouldn't be denied — rallying once again for the win. It's the second straight championship game loss for North Texas, which lost to Arkansas-Little Rock last year on a 3-pointer with 1.5 seconds remaining.

"Anytime you have an opportunity like this, to win a championship and to move on to the NCAA tournament, I think you cherish those opportunities," North Texas coach Johnny Jones said. "To be here the last couple of years and not get it is disappointing, but I have to applaud our guys and the character of them for getting us to this point."

The Hilltoppers lost to the Mean Green 84-67 on Jan. 12, their second game with Harper as coach. Very little about Tuesday night resembled the first meeting.

A freshman had led Western Kentucky in scoring in 21 of its last 24 games before Akol's performance. The Hilltoppers had used 14 different starting line-ups this season through the leadership change, but they put the pieces together for four days.

"This is a basketball team that was ready to play from the jump," North Texas junior Roger Franklin said. "Obviously, throughout the tournament, they knocked off Arkansas-Little Rock and they had a little bit of composure about themselves. "They just wanted it more tonight."

those in the second quarter. He added 11 more in the third quarter, including a pair of 3-pointers during a 18-5 run to open the second half. The scoring spree by Clark turned a 19-12 half-time lead into a 37-17 advantage.

Stenzel provided a steady presence for his team after Clark opened by missing 15 shots on 17 attempts in the first quarter and misfired on their first seven shots from long range. Although shots were hard to come by for the Cards in the first two quarters, Clark made four treys on six attempts in the second half.

"We didn't get rattled," Stenzel said. Stenzel was a steady force for Clark and Humphrey praised the effort by his senior point guard in his final region contest.

"Bopper played like the (region) player of the year and the competitor that he is," Humphrey said. "He's a winner and what more can you say? He loves the big moment."

Just like the previous two region contests, Clark used its defense to fuel the offense and created 17 turnovers, scoring 21 points of the miscues by the Royals.

"We were a little tight early on, but when you defend like we do, you've just got to hang around and wait for your run to come," Humphrey said. "The shots weren't falling, but defensively (we were playing well) and that's where we hang our hat. We just guarded, got out in transition and made some easy buckets. Once those first few threes started going, especially from Bopper, our whole team relaxed and played out of this world."

The ending result was a memorable moment for a team that accomplished a big feat with little expectations.

"This team deserves to finish their career at Rupp Arena," Humphrey said. "They do everything you're supposed to do on and off the court to prepare to win."

Stenzel reflected on the team's journey after celebrating with family and friends, including brother and former Clark standout Robbie Stenzel, who just completed his freshman season at Eastern Kentucky University and was in the stands supporting his younger brother.

"It feels amazing because everybody doubted us at the beginning of the year," Stenzel said. "I knew we could come back and win (the region) again, because we have heart. That's what's gotten us to where we are right now."

The Cards are now just four heartbeats away from reaching the team's ultimate goal of winning a state title.

"I present my thoughts on the future NBA prospects, year round. Why come here instead of the other draft sites? Unlike the other NBA draft sites out there, this is real analysis.

Not what everyone else says about a player and not just a bunch of stats, but true player reports," Isaacson says on his blog.

He took time to offer his thoughts/analysis on Kentucky players as the Wildcats get set to start postseason play and then have to start thinking about the future.

Qestion: Is Anthony Davis a lock to be the No. 1 overall pick?

Isaacson: "Back in December I may not have been sure, but at this point it's clear — there is no other legitimate option at No. 1 besides Davis. I think people need to temper their expectations of his 1st few seasons in the league, because he still has a lot of development to do to match up against NBA big men, but he has a legitimate chance to be a special player."

Question: Does Terrence Jones still maintain his spot in the lottery?

Isaacson: "A lot depends on who exactly comes out early, but assuming that the players who should/most likely will do come out, then I think Jones could sneak into the lottery still, possibly around the 12-14 range. Unfortunately, he is one of those kids who stock dropped by staying another year, but I anticipated this last year. His game is not exactly a great fit for John Calipari's system, and when there is a legitimate big man he is playing with, he gets forced out to the perimeter more than he should. Same thing happened to Patrick Patterson after Calipari brought in DeMarcus Cousins — he was forced out more to the perimeter, and his game suffered. Luckily, the Rockets knew how to use him when they drafted him, and the same thing can happen for Jones."

Question: Where does Darius Miller fall in the NBA draft conversations at this point? Will his recent play help him?

Isaacson: "Come draft season, Miller's is not name you will hear a lot of, but that isn't necessarily a bad thing. Four years on a high profile college team, NBA teams know who he is and what he can do. Plays hard, decent shot, decent defender, but nothing jumps out at you. This is why the mid to late second round of the draft becomes such a crapshoot. Will Miller be one of the top 60 players in the draft? I really doubt it, but all it takes is one coach or general manager who likes the kid or thinks his game is a good fit for the team to give them a chance. Though if he does get picked, it's a safe bet that the D (Developmental) League will be his home for a while."

Question: What are your evaluations of Doron Lamb and Marquis Teague and do you expect one or both to go into the draft?

Isaacson: "I like Lamb's game a lot — confident shooter, is careful with the ball, and he is an underrated perimeter defender. If he was to go in this draft, he may not even crack the first round. With one more year, he could possibly get near the mid-first round. Here is the problem for him though — the numbers game. With Archie Goodwin committed and Shabazz Muhammad still a possibility, will Lamb become an afterthought in the UK rotation? I wouldn't be surprised if Calipari tries to convince him to leave after this season.

"Teague is improving, but he is nowhere near a NBA-caliber point guard yet. He has great speed and he can get into the lane, but he needs to really learn to embrace the distributor role. f he declared this season, I think I team would consider him near the end of the first round only because there will most likely be a lack of depth in this point guard class. However, point guard is Calipari's strength when it comes to development, so another year should do a lot for Teague's game. He could also end up as a mid-first rounder in the 2013 draft if he continues to improve."

■ HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Thursday, March 8, 2012

This year you waver between your feelings and your intellect — two very prominent inner voices. You will learn to integrate them or choose which one you want to lean toward. Relationships prove to be very exciting. If you are attached, the two of you have issues to work through. The good news is that your attraction to each other remains high, which will give the process a boost. If you are single, you are a magnet to the opposite sex. You could date many different people or one special person; it is your call. LIBRA wants to relate closely.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★ You could be stressed out from pressure at work. You are handling too many different situations, and you need to distance yourself. You juggle your feelings with your obligations. This attempt to balance your life could be difficult at best. Tonight, listen to a suggestion.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★★ Let your creativity soar, and you will be capable of turning a losing situation into a winning one. A friend plays a major role in what is about to take place. Understand how important it is to keep some facts to yourself. You will see different results. Tonight: Put your feet up.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★★ You might be ready to try another approach or do something differently. Impulsiveness pushes you down the right path. Communication is off, so trying to convince another person of the rightness of your ways could be a problem. Tonight: Have more fun.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★★ You are likely to say exactly what you are thinking, and others are likely to respond accordingly. You might not be sure what to do. Keep communication flowing; otherwise, you could feel stuck. Juggle news, feelings and any other information you think you need to share. Tonight: Head home while singing an ode to the Full Moon.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★★ Use special caution with a financial matter. You could be very drawn and tired of juggling funds and/or sharing your innate talents. Pressure builds if you are not careful. Tonight: Talk yourself through discomfort.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★★ You are all personality and then some. You also could feel as if you have pushed way too hard, and you find others to be constantly challenging. Know when to say you have had enough. Establish limits for how much you want to give. Tonight: Your treat.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★ ★ Use the afternoon to review some details and make sure everything is as it should be. You could be more on target about a personal matter than you realize. In the next few days, you will see how very right you are. Tonight: As you like it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★★ Use the daytime hours to the max. You could be surprised by what you make possible. Meetings and alliances with others could be strategic and essential. You might be pressured to make an uncomfortable emotional choice. Tonight:

Vanish.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★ Take a long-overdue stand. You could feel pressured to maintain a steady pace. Your personal life might be in direct opposition to what must be done. Try to integrate the differences. Zero in on what you want. Tonight: Focus on your goals.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★★ Keep reaching out for someone at a distance to get more information. Seek out different opinions. You could feel torn between two choices. Reflect and decide what it is that you want, and/or which way you should go. Tonight: In the limelight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★★ Deal directly with others. A partner and several associates respond more positively on a one-on-one basis. You easily could be overspending and need to rein yourself in. Listen to suggestions. Tonight: Let your mind wander.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★★ Defer to others, and understand what is happening within a relationship. You need to allow others to walk in your footsteps. They will change their tune very quickly after they assume a responsibility or two that you previously had shouldered. Tonight: Accept a dinner invitation.
